Some of the Chicago board of education object to the women teachers riding on bicycles. As between a woman on a bicycle and a fool director, the woman ought always to have the right of way.

In answer to inquiries our Consul at Brunswick, Germany, writes that horse meat fresh is worth 7 cents a pound and smoked 12 cents. And that's old tough horse, too. Our young, tender, juicy American horse would bring more.

Massachusetts apple worshippers are talking of erecting a monument on the spot where the original Baldwin apple tree stood. They should also, perhaps, pass a vote of thanks to the sarpint which showed Mother Eve the true inwardness of the apple, if it wasn't the Baldwin apple.

The Chicago Record, which takes a paternal interest in the Presidential aspirants, gently hints that if they are wise they will cater to the bicycle vote, which is becoming a political factor in this country. Perhaps it was some such suggestion as this that got Mr. Harrison to taking the chances of taking a header.

Lars Ericksen, of Brooklyn, values his wife's services. She got under a trolley car sometime ago and had her foot cut off and received a verdict for $23,000. Now Lars has instituted suit for $20,000 damages for loss of his wife's services. If Lars had several wives and could persuade them to fool with the trolley cars he might eventually become rich.

An old negro boatman who was found dead the other day had more confidence in life-preservers than he had in banks. On examination of his body by the coroner, an old life-preserver in the advanced stages of decay was found strapped around him. It was taken off and thrown aside. But his son shortly put in an appearance and enquired for that life-preserver. When it was pointed out to him he ran his knife into it and took out $2,762 in paper money.

It is expected that the Chicago canal, connecting Lake Michigan with the Mississippi river, will be completed in 1897 or '98. This will make a ship way from the Lakes to the Gulf. The original idea was to make a drainage canal to carry off the filth of the Chicago river, which is the sewer of Chicago, but the idea grew and the ship canal is the outcome. The idea is not a new one, however, for it is said to have been suggested 300 years ago by Joliet when he explored that section of country, and it has been before the National Government in some shape for nearly a century.

We hope that French Professor who has discovered the microbe of old age and how to preserve perpetual youth by barricading the microbe will keep his secret until John Sherman and a few more of his kind are gathered in. It would be a bad thing for the human family if John were to live and retain his vigor for a thousand years or so.

A Fourth of July committee of Lynn, Mass., is going to buy 1,000 sailor suits, so that 1,100 children can parade in uniform. By what process they will crowd 1,100 little fellows into 1,000 suits, is not explained. But our Yankee friends are crowders when they want to be.

Hon. Wm. C. Whitney, of New York, says he doesn't want to be President. There are several men in this country who don't want to be President but they are too modest to say so.

If the Pennsylvania paper which presents a Turkish towel to every paid-up subscriber added a bar of soap it might make a scoop.

CAROLINA YACHT CLUB.

Called Meeting—A Proposition to Reduce the Initiation Fee Rejected.

A meeting of the Carolina Yacht Club was held yesterday afternoon at the City Hall. Mr. Geo. W. Kidder, president of the Club, was in the chair and Mr. Nat Quince secretary.

Mr. Kidder stated that the meeting was called under constitutional requirements for the purpose of considering a proposition advanced and favored by some of the members to reduce the initiation fee, now $25, to a smaller amount, say $10.

After discussion the proposition was put to a vote and rejected, the vote standing 34 against and 39 for, but as a two-thirds majority in favor was necessary the proposition failed.

There are now 245 members of the Club, and while this is not an unwieldly membership, it somewhat crowds the house on gala days and as the Club owns some valuable property adjoining, it was thought by some of the members that if the admission fee was reduced the roll might be increased one hundred or more and enough money be thus secured to erect additional buildings and add in other ways to the facilities and accommodations there. The necessary majority did not concur, however, and hence the proposition was defeated.

The Weather.

It was warm in Wilmington yesterday, and decidedly warmer in other towns in the State. While the maximum temperature here was 84 degrees, it was 93 at Charlotte, Goldsboro and Greensboro, 90 at Weldon and Raleigh, and 86 at Newbern.

The highest barometer on the weather map yesterday morning was in the Gulf and the adjacent States, while it was lower towards the North, and especially so in the Northwest, where the lowest appeared. The temperature remained nearly stationary throughout the country, or with only very slight changes. Heavy rain had fallen in portions of this State, and in South Carolina, Georgia, portions of Texas and in the upper Mississippi Valley; light showers in other sections. More or less rain was reported Sunday night from most of the cotton region districts, the heaviest being in the Texas and Wilmington districts, being very heavy in portions of the Texas districts.

Fire Sunday Morning.

The Fire Department was called out about half-past four o'clock Sunday morning to a fire near the corner of Water and Mulberry streets, in a small wooden building occupied by a colored barber named Scott, and owned by Mr. A. C. Wessell. The liquor store and barroom of Mr. M. D. Croom, on the corner of Water and Mulberry, was also on fire when the Department arrived. The firemen speedily extinguished the blaze, and the damage was light; estimated at $100 on the barber shop, $25 on the building occupied by Mr. Croom and $10 on his stock; the latter caused by water.

RALEIGH NEWS BUDGET.

DEATH OF R. STANHOPE PULLEN, A PUBLIC SPIRITED CITIZEN.

He Contributed Liberally of His Means to Many Enterprises—The Bauer-Blythe Marriage—The Baptist Female College—Its Total Cost Will Amount to $52,000.

[Star Correspondence.]

RALEIGH, N. C., June 24.

Mr. R. Stanhope Pullen, Raleigh's most generous and public spirited citizen, passed away Sunday afternoon, after quite a short illness. The immediate cause of his death was bladder disease. Mr. Pullen was born in Wake county and started the race of life without a penny. By careful foresight, strict attention to business and shrewd judgment Mr. Pullen amassed a fortune of over $200,000. During his lifetime he had contributed most liberally, in proportion to his means, to public enterprises. Mr. Pullen has done more for Raleigh than any citizen ever did. A few years ago he began the construction of attractive dwellings in the northeastern section of the city. What were once fields are elegant residence blocks, and to Mr. Pullen belongs the credit for building up that section of Raleigh. Later he turned his attention to the western portion of the city and made the fields on the Hillsboro road beautiful residence locations. A few years ago Mr. Pullen donated 60 acres of land near the city limits to be used in making a Park. The plot of ground is now known as Pullen Park, being a lovely place, frequented by most of the people of Raleigh. Mr. Pullen donated 60 acres of land near the city to the Agricultural and Mechanical College, which the State accepted and constructed buildings on. He gave 10 acres to the Normal School for girls at Greensboro. He also was the largest contributor towards the construction of the new Edenton Street (M. E.) Church—the handsomest in the city—and was chiefly instrumental in the undertaking of building it. This gentleman was truly a philanthropist, one whom the State as well as Raleigh will lose by his death.

Mr. A. G. Bauer, the gentleman who married Miss Rachael Blythe, the half Indian, in Washington City, and concerning whom there was some doubts expressed about he or his wife being able to resume their abode in this city because of the State laws on intermarriage of races, returned here this morning. Mrs. Bauer did not accompany him, but expects to arrive soon. She is now in Baltimore.

Mr. W. E. Ashley, President of the North Carolina Car Company, has returned from Alexandria Bay where he attended the annual meeting of the Master Car Builders Association.

Mr. Ashley was the only attendant from this State. He says the Southern States were well represented. There were about 1,500 delegates in attendance.

Rev. Hartwell Edwards, of Fayetteville, has been selected by the Directors of the Baptist Woman's College to assist Rev. G. L. Stringfield in canvassing the State for funds to build the College. The total cost of the building will be $88,000 and with the site will amount to $52,000. The site has been paid for. Work is being pushed rapidly and with two agents in the field, it is hoped that the buildings will be completed without work being stopped. The building will be much handsomer than the Governor's Mansion which is on the square above it. In fact, it will be the handsomest college building for women in the South.

[Special Star Telegram.]

The funeral of Stanhope Pullen was attended by the Board os Aldermen, the Mayor, various organizations and a great concourse of people. Mayor Russ has called a meeting of citizens to-morrow night to take action in regard to Mr. Pullen's death.

The body of a decomposed horse has been lying in a tributary of Raleigh's water supply for three weeks The authorities were notified Saturday to remove the carcass, and it was only moved to day. Citizens are very indignant.

The Attorney General gives the opinion that Bryan, a member of the Legislature and also of the Arrington Commitee, has forfeited both offices by taking an oath as director of the penitentiary. The fact that he took it makes him ineligible, according to the State law; yet he is only a member of Kitchen's quondam board.

CAROLINA MUTUAL

Fire Insurance Company,
of Charlotte, N. C.

The CAROLINA MUTUAL is a strong NORTH CAROLINA Company. It is, however, a stock company, and issues absolutely non-participating and non-assessable policies. Its mutual feature consists in a charter provision, that one-third of its directors must be POLICY-HOLDERS who are NOT stockholders elected by the POLICY-HOLDERS; this is a very strong point, the policy-holders who have great interests at stake, have a share in the management of the Company, and will always know its condition. Better than this, the CAROLINA MUTUAL deposits all premiums received at this agency to their credit with the WILMINGTON SAVINGS AND TRUST COMPANY. This makes it practically a local company. The directors of the company are:

P. M. BROWN,

TIMBER CULTURE.

There are certain kinds of timber of high commercial value which are rapidly disappearing from this country and will before many years disappear altogether unless husbanded and propagated. The white pine, which was once so abundant in the extreme Northern and Northwestern States is almost exhausted, and Southern pine is now largely taking its place and 'ere long must take its place entirely. Western lumber men realizing this have come or sent their agents South and quietly secured possession of large tracts of our most valuable pine forests.

The hickory of the middle tier of States has been pretty well used up and our Southern hickory where the facilities of transportation are within reach is rapidly becoming so.

The walnut of the Middle States has almost disappeared and the axe of the woodsman has been turned against our Southern walnut, where it is within hauling distance of a navigable stream, or a railroad, while large tracts now remote from transportation have been purchased to be held for higher prices in the future when the timber on account of its increasing scarcity will be even more valuable than it is now.

Walnut is a prized timber for furniture-making and for ornamental work in buildings on account of its durability, the ease with which it is worked and the fine finish it takes, and it will always be in demand both in this country and in Europe.

In the early days when it was abundant and but little demand for it, the farmers of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky and other States made rails of it and fenced their farms with it. At present prices if these rails were standing in trees, they would be worth more than the farms. The farmers wouldn't be apt to make rails now out of trees which cut into boards would bring from $75 to $125 a thousand feet, or from $50 to $80 a thousand in squared logs, of small dimensions and higher prices for logs of larger dimensions.

In view of these facts, the increasscarcity and increasing value of our commercial timbers we have written often in these columns on the importance of husbanding and protecting our pine forests and advised against slaughtering them or bartering them away for a trifle to enrich others who know their value better than we do.

We have written about the pecan, the hickory and the walnut tree, have discussed their value and their growing value, and the immense possibilities in them as producers of wealth, if cultivated, and we have furnished facts and figures to warrant all that we have urged in their favor. These articles, supported by correspondence with cultivators of the pecan in other States, have resulted in the planting of some groves in this State, and the planters regard it as the best investment they have ever made, although it is too soon yet to begin to reap the fruits.

The hickory, which is much more hardy than the pecan, will grow any where in the United States and is indgenous to the South, where it attains its highest perfection, the finest and highest priced timber being found on the least fertile ridges. But this is a slow growth tree to cultivate for the timber alone, but as a nut-grower, if the right kind of seed were planted, would be valuable, and a small grove would, when it came into bearing, bring in a handsome income, and become at the same time yearly more valuable as the trees increased in size, and more valuable also as a nut producer, the demand for which is annually increasing.

But there is a bonanza in the walnut for any man who has the enterprise to plant and the patience to wait a few years until the trees attain some growth and come into bearing. There are few well-to-do farmers in the South who have not more land than they should cultivate or can cultivate profitably. A man who owns two hundred acres, say, could very well set aside twenty acres, if no more, for a walnut grove, the only cost of which would be the gathering of the seed, plowing the land, planting and fencing, and cultivating enough while the young trees were getting a start to keep down the weeds and the grass. After they get a start they are rapid growers and in five or six years begin to bear and would soon repay the entire cost of planting and cultivating. Of course the nut crop, in quantity and value increases every year, and so do the trees which are increasing in size. The nuts alone from such a grove would bring in a handsome income every year, leaving out of consideration altogether the timber cut every five or six years to thin out the grove.

The farmer who would plant such a grove for his children would leave them an inheritance that would make them independent by the time they reached manhood or womanhood and supply him and them with a good deal of ready money in the meantime, without a tithe of the labor that any other crop would require, and with not a tithe of the uncertainties.

One of our naval officers who participated as one of the representatives of this Government in the celebration or the opening of the Kiel canal said he felt heartily ashamed while sailing through the canal at the way the United States had tooted the trambone and banged the big basso over the Nicaragua canal, and yet neither built it nor permitted any one else to build it, while Germany without any tooting or banging, went quietly on and built the Kiel canal and when it was finished invited the world to the formal opening. Well, there was something in that not to make a high spirited American feel very proud, to say the least; but there isn't as much politics in those things on the other side of the ocean as there is on this side. We have been talking about that canal for fifty years, its feasibility was established beyond the shadow of a doubt both from a military and commercial standpoint is generally conceded, the sentiment of the American people is almost unanimous for it, the cost would be so small in comparison with the benefits that would come from it as to be insignificant, and yet, strange to say, every time it comes up in Congress it is sidetracked to make way for matters that do not approach it in general interest or importance.

It has been said that good roads are one of the indications of advanced civilization. Whatever truth there may be in this, they surely are an indication of advanced sense and of the level-headedness of the people who have them. Judged by this criterion, the American people wouldn't have much to brag of, for there are few countries which lay any claim to civilization or progress which have worse roads, if they have need for roads at all. One reason of this, perhaps, is that in the rapid growth of railroad building in this country, which has been very great, the dirt roads were lost sight of, and in some States excellent roads which had been constructed were permitted to become wrecks because supplanted by railroads. The rail and the steam car have taken the place of the turnpike and the stage coach. There may not be the same necessity for turnpikes that there was before the days of railroads, but the necessity for good roads to reach the iron roads is as great as it ever was and even greater because in these days when competition is keen in the markets the farmer or other producer who hopes to hold his own in competition must enjoy good facilities for getting to market, and he can't have this if he has to dray his crops over bad roads to get to market with them.

CURRENT COMMENT.

—— Thomas B. Reed will have his hands full in the next Congress, and is not wasting himself on any preliminary powwows.—Washington Star, Ind.

—— Russia is the central figure in the Eastern imbroglio in Turkey. She is likewise the central figure in the Eastern imbroglio in Japan. But the policy she will adopt in either case is as past finding out as are the views of ex President Harrison on the monetary question. — Philadelphia Record, Dem.

—— The discussion of a third term for President Cleveland is in active progress, but it is only just to say that it is confined entirely to some of the more reckless Republican organs, and the few Democratic organs who cordially hate the President. That Mr. Cleveland ever entertained the idea of being a candidate for another term we do not believe. Even if he were ambitious to reverse the unbroken custom of the nation, he could not be blind to the fact that that custom is irreversible. —Phil. Times, Ind.

MINOR MENTION.

In an editorial giving the amount of silver in the Treasury and in circulation, the New York World says:

"The United States Treasury holds nearly 350,000,000 silver dollars, against which paper certificates have been issued and are mostly in circulation. There are in the hands of the people something over 50,000,000 silver dollars. All of these coins, of the "demonetization" of which so much is heard, are a full legal tender for their face value.

"The Treasury likewise holds 5,000 tons of silver bullion, which cost the taxpayers of this country nearly $194,000,000, but which could be bought to-day for $30,000,000 less. Against this bullion Treasury notes were issued, redeemable under the law in silver at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, but which the Government has been forced to redeem in gold in order to maintain the equal value of its coins and notes."

These Treasury notes are "redeemable under the law in silver at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury," but we are here told (and that is the stereotyped excuse for violating the law) that "the Government has been forced to redeem them in gold in order to maintain the equal value of its coins and notes." What a fraud. To protect the Government the Secretary of the Treasury was vested with the discretionary power to pay those notes in either gold or silver, the presumption being that he would protect the Treasury by paying in whichever of these coins it could best command. That's why the "discretion," which was practically equivalent to a mandate, was given to him. But how has this "discretion" been exercised? By transferring it from the Secretary of the Treasury to the holder of the note, who is required by law to be content with silver coin, with the same kind of metal that he sold to the Government. If he demands gold, which, of course he does, the Treasury hands him out the gold and lets the silver pile up, as useless as so much copper. And that's the way the parity is maintained, the "equal value of our coins and notes," by paying out gold and dumping the silver into the vaults. The "discretion" which entirely ignores one coin maintains the parity between the coins in a unique way.

— Charlotte News: Messrs. R. J. Wentz and R. H. Hoover, who are working the Hill mine at Pineville, were in the city to-day with a hand full of gold "buttons" valued at $340. It was a portion of the output of the Hill mine for four days. During those four days, they rocked fifteen bushels of ore and secured $635 in gold. These miners bring in more or less every ten days, and this, taken in connection with the $16,000 brick left at the mint here a few days ago by the superintendent of the Haile gold mine, shows that Mecklenburg is still producing gold.

— Salisbury Herald: Wheat has about all been cut and the farmers are taking a short resting spell. The crop is first rate, being above the average. —— A lady living in Wilkesboro who once resided in Salisbury had quite a thrilling experience with a large black snake several days ago. Early in the morning she was making up the bed in which she and an infant had slept the night before when she discovered a huge black snake under the bolster. It had been there all night. It was killed and found to be about four feet long.

UP HILL.

Does the road wind up hill all the way?
Yes, to the very end.
Will the day's journey take the whole long day?
From morn to night, my friend.

But is there for the night a resting place,
A roof for when the slow, dark hours begin?
May not the darkness hide it from my face?
You cannot miss that inn.

Shall I meet other wayfarers at night,
Those who have gone before?
Then must I knock or call when just in sight?
They will not keep you standing at that door.

Shall I find comfort, travel sore and weak?
Of labor you shall find the sum.
Will there be beds for me and all who seek?
Yes, beds for all who come.

—Christina G. Rossetti.

THE HINDOO HELLS.

A Concatenation of Redhot Horrors Ending In a Lake of Fire.

It is a mystery to enlightened western nations how the Hindoos ever managed to evolve such a frightfully exaggerated idea of hell—as much of an enigma perhaps as our fantastic ideas of the infernal regions will be to the more enlightened races of the coming ages.

The Hindoos believe in a plurality of hells, 136 in all—a monstrous redhot aggregation bearing the name of "the Narakas." This gigantic apartment house, which has been especially prepared for the souls of the damned, is of unthinkable length and breadth and has walls more than 100 miles in thickness. Th intense heat of the interior keeps these walls at a white heat, and through their many loopholes shines light of such intense brightness that it bursts the eyeballs of all who look in that direction, "even though they be removed from the fires by a distance of 400 leagues."

The 136 divisions of the grand Naraka are again grouped into 28 superintendencies, each in charge of an imp called the goulall, or "soul eater." It is the business of this goulall to keep his charges in perpetual dread, impressing each with the fact that as soon as he comes out of any of the apartments his soul may be cooked until it is sufficiently tender to make a dainty morsel for the superintendent to roll under his tongue.

As each soul is being ushered from one apartment to the other it is invariably met by Yamakl, the Hindoo Pluto, an exaggerated devil 940 miles high, who has hairs on his body which stand out like palm trees. Yamaki does not lay hands upon the tortured being that is paraded before him, but his fierce roars "are such as to cause the poor victim's skin to crack so that he leaks blood from every inch of his body."

In each of the 28 subdivisions the tortured one is treated to something new and unique in the line of misery. In one he has his toes and finger nails plucked out and the empty sockets which formerly held his eyes filled with melted wax and then has horns inserted in the places which in other days were occupied by the organs of vision. In another he is forced to have his teeth pulled out and heated to a white heat and is then compelled to swallow them, along with large quantities of pepper cakes and boiling oil. In each division he is subjected to some new horror until the whole round is finished, whereupon he is cast into a real orthodox "lake of fire which burneth forever and ever."

—St. Louis Republic.

WEIGHING THE AIR.

A Serviceable Barometer That Anybody May Make Without Expense.

There is one atmospheric phenomenon about which there is a widespread misconception. When the smoke lies close to the surface of the earth, instead of moving upward as it generally does, many people think it is because the air is heavy. The same people will tell you perhaps that damp air is heavier than dry air, for it is on days when the air is damp that the smoke lies close to the earth.

On the contrary, damp air is lighter than dry air, and it is because the air is damp that the smoke does not ascend. It is purely a question of gravity, of weight. If the lower stratum of air be heavier than the smoke, the latter will go up; if it be lighter than the smoke, the smoke will not go up so readily.

The barometer is the instrument used by the scientists to determine the relative weight of the air. As usually made, it consists of a cup of mercury, with which is connected a graduated glass tube. From the upper part of this tube the air has been exhausted, thus forming a vacuum, and the height of the column of mercury in the tube denotes the weight of the atmosphere.

The explanation of this is quite simple. The pressure of the atmosphere upon the mercury in the cup forces the mercury up into the tube, where it meets no resistance because the empty part of the tube is a vacuum. Hence the column of mercury will rise or fall in the tube as the pressure is greater or less.

Everybody is familiar enough with weather reports to know that we have "high barometer" on clear, dry days and "low barometer" on damp days; that the first indicates good weather and the last stormy weather. But "high barometer" means that the column of mercury is well up in the tube, and "low barometer" that it is down. We know therefore that as dry air bears down more heavily upon the mercury in the cup than damp air, it must be heavier than damp air.

A very simple and serviceable barometer may be made at home, without cost. The only things needed are a wide mouthed glass jar—a pickle bottle will do—a clean Venetian oil flask and half a pint of plain water. Pour the water into the jar, letting it come to within one-third of the top, and insert the oil flask upside down in the jar, so that the neck of the flask will just enter the water. That is all.

If the atmospheric conditions are favorable to clear, fine weather, the water will rise in the flask; if, on the contrary, a storm is in prospect, the water will fall. The air affects the water just as it does the mercury in the tube.—Philadelphia Times.

THE GREAT APOSTLE.

Three Different Descriptions of the Kind of a Man St. Paul Was.

Some 85 or 40 years ago the pastor of a New England village church adopted a plan to interest the members of his flock in the study of the Bible. It was this: At the Wednesday evening meeting he would give out some topic to be discussed on the ensuing week, thus giving a week for them to study up. One week the subject was St. Paul. After the preliminary devotional exercises the pastor called upon his deacons to "speak to the question." One immediately arose and began to describe the personal appearance of the great apostle to the gentiles. He said St. Paul was a tall, rather spare man, with black hair and eyes, dark complexion, bilious temperament, etc. His picture of St. Paul was a faithful portrait of himself. He sat down, and another pillar of the church said: "I think the brother preceding me has read the Scriptures to little purpose if his description of St. Paul is a sample of his Biblical knowledge. St. Paul was, as I understand it, a short, thickset man, with sandy hair, gray eyes, florid complexion and a nervous, sanguine temperament," giving, like his predecessor, an accurate picture of himself.

He was followed by another, who had a keen sense of the ludicrous and who was withal an inveterate stammerer. He spoke about as follows: "My bro-bro-brethren, I have ne-ne-never fo-found much ab-about the pe-pe-personal ap-pe-pe-pearance of St. P-P-P-Paul. But one thing is clearly established, and tha-that is St. P-P-P-Paul had an imp-pe-pediment in his speech." The effect can be imagined. A tidal wave of audible smiles swept over the congregation, the good clergyman taking his full quota. He immediately arose and dismissed the assembly.—Boston Herald.

SHE WAS A WOMAN.

And For This Reason There Was No Occasion For Surprise.

The sun beat down that blistering afternoon on the little adobe cabin just beyond the arroyo, and on the far side in the shade sat two sweltering cow punchers with a pack of cards between them. It was too hot for even this mild exercise, but it served to keep their minds off the weather, and they played lazily along. At last one of them threw his cards down.

"By gravy, Bill," he exclaimed, "I can't play any more."

"What's the matter?" inquired Bill. "Too hot for you?"

"No. 'Tain't that, though the Lord knows it's most hot enough for anything. It's that little girl down there at old Slocum's."

"What's she got to do with the game?" asked Bill in surprise.

"Nothing much, I guess, but a good deal with me."

"How?" and Bill picked up the pack and began shuffling the cards aimlessly.

"Oh, I don't know."

"Stuck on her?" inquired Bill, with a laugh, which struck his companion as rather harsh.

"Not exactly, I guess."

"She's the purtiest thing in this valley," said Bill admiringly.

"I know it," admitted the other. "I was down there last night, and she was sweeter than ever."

"Well," impatiently, "what are you going to do about it?"

"What would you advise?"

"That depends on what kind of advice you want."

"I was thinking about marrying her."

Bill gave a long whistle and stopped shuffling the cards.

"What, marry a half breed, and you having the kind of folks you have back in the east?" he said seriously.

"I don't see how I can get out of it honorably," he reluctantly confessed. "I've been going down there to see her for six months now, and she has been kind of expecting me to come. I didn't think much about it at first, but now blame me if I don't think about her pretty much all the time. The last four or five times I've been to see her she showed me straight that she thought a lot of me, and last night she told me everything, and said if I left her her heart would break and she would drown herself in the river. I can't stand that, you know, and besides I'd rather marry her myself than have anybody else marry her."

"She'll git old man Slocum's property when he goes over the divide," said Bill thoughtfully, "and that 's worth a pile."

"Yes, but I don't care for that. It's the girl and my own honorable action in the matter."

They talked until the sun had sunk behind the mountain, and by that time it was decided that Bill would go with his friend Joe and settle the business with the girl's father, old man Slocum. Early the next morning they set out, and before the sun had reached the hot place in the heavens they were at Slocum's.

"Where's Meg?" asked Joe, after they had passed the compliments of the morning.

"Oh, she's skipped," answered Slocum, with a laugh.

"Skipped?" gasped Joe.

"Yes. Skipped some time in the night with Pete Smiley, and she needn't 'a' done it, fer Pete was agreeable to me," and he laughed again.

Joe felt something rise in his throat and drop back again like a piece of lead. Bill looked at him curiously.

"Gals will be gals," said Bill, turning to Slocum, "but what we come down here to see you about, Mr. Slocum, is cattle," and he carried it through nobly.—Detroit Free Press.

Not a Fighter.

Two old negroes, one of whom wore a Grand Army of the Republic uniform, while the other was attired in the conventional black Prince Albert coat which is ever part and parcel of the colored "pahson," met on the corner of Ninth and Walnut streets. Both were waiting for a car. The wait turned out to be a long one, and the men, though evidently strangers, began chatting pleasantly on the condition of the weather and other stock subjects.

Finally the "pahson," with a comprehensive glance over the uniform which the other wore, asked:

"Was yo' in the wah, sah?"

"Yessah; 'deed I wuz. 'Deed I'ze in de wah."

"Den yo' had a taste of de late unpleasantness?"

"Yas; co'se I did. Fact is, pahson, I had mo' dan a taste. I done went and bit off mo' dan I cud chaw up fine."

"Did yo' run when dey commence shooting?" asked the "pahson" suspiciously.

"Dat I did, sah—dat I did—an I'd a-run befo' ef I'd knowed it wuz comin."

"Den yo' isn't much on fightin?" queried the expounder of the gospel.

"No, sah; I'se not. I'll leab dat for people what ain't got nuffin else to do. Cookin is my perfeshun." And just then the car came.—Kansas City Times.

Lost the Prize.

The late James Crossley, a noted bibliomaniac, hied him one memorable day to a bookstall in Shudehill market, and spying a little volume took it up and glanced carelessly through it. After awhile he asked its price from an old woman and was told it was two and sixpence. "I'll give you sixpence for it," said Crossley. "Nay," replied the poor old dame, "it cost me 2 shillings." Whereupon our book devourer threw it down in disgust and retired. A gentleman, overhearing the altercation, stepped forward and purchased it at the sum demanded. Crossley returned soon after, and noticing the book had gone anxiously inquired what had become of it. "Sold," answered the woman, "for what you refused to give." "Tell me who bought it and I'll give him 10 shillings for it!" said Crossley eagerly. The moral is self evident.—Exchange.

Kicked the King's Horse.

On the battlefield, as everywhere else, Bismarck looked after the interests of his imperial master. During the battle of Koeniggratz, the old emperor—then king of Prussia—had exposed himself and his staff to the enemy's fire, and would not hear of retreating to a safe distance. At last Bismarck rode up to him, saying: "As responsible minister of the crown, I must insist upon your majesty's retreat to a safe distance. If your majesty were to be killed, the victory would be of no use to us." The king saw the force of this, and slowly retreated, but in his zeal returned again and again to the front.

"When I noticed it," said Bismarck, telling the story, "I only rose in my saddle and looked at him. He understood perfectly, and called out, rather angrily, 'Yes, I am coming.' But we did not get on fast enough, and at last I rode up close to the king, took my foot out of the right stirrup, and secretly gave his horse an energetic kick. Such a thing had never happened to the fat mare, but the move was successful, for she set off in a fine canter."—Washington Star.

Keepsake Teeth.

There is a curious reminiscence of the past in usage by some European mothers, and it is shown by the keeping of the first castoff teeth—"the milk teeth" of their little ones—and to preserve these they give them a golden setting, wearing them in a ring. To a fond mother there can be nothing out of the way or approaching to repulsiveness in a souvenir of this character. The preservation of such little teeth we do not think is common in England or in the United States. We make, however, a distinction between a tooth and a lock of hair. It is the indestructible quality of both things which makes them suitable mementos. Nevertheless, all poetical sentimentality being put aside, the preservation of the tooth is a return to the ways of the most remote antiquity. The excellent lady who, then, is a mother, and who cuts holes in the lobes of her pretty ears and wears on her finger a ring with a little snow white tooth in it imitates in many ways the tastes of her ancestral sex, say, 5,000 or 10,000 years ago.—New York Times.

THE POET'S GIFT.

The poet looks with unsealed eyes
Upon the everchanging skies,
The vale and mountain, plain and brook
He reads like pages of a book.

His ear attuned, earth's melody,
The zephyr and the moaning sea,
The bird's song and musician's art,
All find an echo in his heart.

He feels the charm and subtle power
Contained in every wayside flower.
He is akin to all things wild,
For he is nature's simple child.

All living things to him are dear,
And God is ever very near.
To poets only this is given—
To find on earth a part of heaven.

A FEUD.

"I'll tell you, Frank, it's got to the point where something must be done," said Mrs. Burnett, and as she spoke she rapped at the small knuckles that were moving toward the sugar bowl. Morton, aged 9, jerked his hand out of the way and laughed at his mother, who pursed up her lips to conceal a smile.

"Don't do that, Morton," said Mr. Burnett. Then, turning to his wife, he asked, "What have they been doing now?"

"That boy and some more of his crowd put tin cans along the top of the fence and then threw at them to knock them off. About every other stone went over the top of the fence and went sailing across our back yard. If one of them had struck anybody, he wouldn't have known what hurt him."

"What did you do?"

"What did I do? I went out and told them if they didn't stop I'd send for a policeman. I said to that Deakin boy, 'It's a shame your mother can't teach you to be a little better than a savage.'"

"Maybe she didn't know they were doing it."

"I do believe she puts 'em up to it. That boy's enough to try the patience of a saint."

"Next time he comes into our yard I'll bet I throw something at him," put in Morton, whose chin was dripping with a mild mixture of milk and coffee.

"You leave him alone," said the male parent. "You get into enough fights already."

"Well, Frank, these boys are forever picking on him," said Mrs. Burnett.

"Boys are a good deal alike," responded her husband. "I'll bet when he gets out he's the same as the rest of them."

Morton grinned and said nothing.

The only member of the Burnett family who had not joined in the arraignment of the neighbors was Alice, 6 years of age. She knew all about the feud and shared in the suspicions of her mother, but at present she was too busy with her supper.

The Deakins lived next door, and although there was a dividing fence it had not kept the two families apart.

In the year during which the two households had dwelt side by side there had been a growing enmity. Yet Mrs. Burnett had never spoken a word to Mrs. Deakin, and her husband knew nothing of Mr. Deakin, except that he worked with his hands for a living and spent a great many evenings at home.

It would have been rather difficult for either the Burnetts or the Deakins to explain how the feud started, but it was operated from the first through the children.

There were two Deakin children—Lawrence, or Larry, aged 10, and little Willie, who, at the tender age of 8, had learned to regard the Burnett tribe with scorn and hatred and suffer to some degree under the indignities heaped upon his family by that arch fiend of juvenility, Morton Burnett.

For when the Deakins sat around the supper table and cast up the accounts of the day it was Larry who posed as the persecuted and abused child, while Morton Burnett was pictured as an infant of dark intents, headed straight for the bridewell.

"If I was a man, Tom Deakin," said the wife, "I'll warrant you I'd go over to that house and give notice that things are simply going too far. Today that boy got up on the fence and called Lawrence all kinds of names."

"He said that his mother had said that ma didn't have clothes fit to wear," suggested Lawrence, who had begun to breathe hard during the recital of his grievances.

"Anyway, I don't try to make myself look like a peacock every time I start to church," said Mrs. Deakin.

This comparison of Mrs. Burnett to a peacock tickled the children, and they laughed immoderately. Tom Deakin restrained them with a quiet "Tut, tut!" and said that the proper way to get along was to pay no attention to the neighbors.

"I'd like to know how you can help it," said his wife. "That boy is up to some mischief every hour of the day, and his mother seems to encourage him in everything he does. He throws things over into our yard, teases Willie and makes faces at him."

"Next time I see him pick on Willie I'll give him another licking," suggested Larry.

"You'll do nothing of the kind," exclaimed his mother. "Don't you remember the talking to I gave you the other time you had that fight with him?"

Lawrence remembered the mild rebuke, and his inward resolution was not changed. Tom Deakin went for his pipe, oppressed with the thought that he had been very unlucky in his selection of neighbors.

These complaints had come to him day after day from the downtrodden members of his family.

The feud had grown from a thousand aggravating circumstances.

Suppose Morton Burnett to be on the fence. His mother would open the back door and say loudly enough to make herself heard through the open windows of the Deakin house: "Morty, get down from that fence! Haven't I told you about that?"

Mrs. Deakin would hear and understand. Then she would wait her opportunity to appear on the back stoop and retaliate.

In summer time, when both women were out of doors much of the time, they occasionally exchanged glances which were more significant than anything they could have said.

When Mrs. Burnett put out her washing, she knew that Mrs. Deakin was watching her and counting the number of pillow slips and tablecloths.

When Mrs. Burnett came to the back door and called out, "Come, Alice, dear, and practice your music lesson," it was equivalent to saying to Mrs. Deakin, "Aha, we have a cottage organ in our house, but you haven't any in yours."

Mrs. Deakin had frequently informed Tom that the Burnett organ was a cheap secondhand thing.

One day, when Mrs. Deakin came home from a funeral in a covered carriage, there was consternation in the Burnett family, and accounts were not fairly balanced until a new coat of paint was put on the Burnett house.

The Deakin children told the Burnett children all that their mother had said about the probable character of Mrs. Burnett. Likewise the Burnett children repeated to the Deakin children all that they had heard at the supper table. Mrs. Burnett knew that she was being reported on by Mrs. Deakin, and Mrs. Deakin felt it her duty to learn what the viperish thing had been saying. Frank Burnett and Tom Deakin became convinced each that the other's family was probably more to blame over the fence, clothesline and garbage box issues.

Allie Burnett started to run across the street one day in front of a delivery wagon. She fell, scrambled to her feet again, and the horse's knee struck her in the back. She fell on the block pavement and lay quiet.

Mrs. Deakin saw it all from her front window. She ran into the street and gathered the muddy child in her arms. The frightened driver had left his wagon, and he followed her timidly to the front door of the Burnett house.

Mrs. Burnett screamed, and then began to cry.

"Run for a doctor, you loony!" said Mrs. Deakin to the driver as she placed the limp little body on a bed and then ran for cold water and cloths.

When the girl opened her eyes, she found her mother on one side, Mrs. Deakin on the other, while a reassuring physician smiled at her over the footboard.

"She's a little jolted up and bumped her head when she fell, but it was mostly shock," he said.

"Law me," gasped Mrs. Deakin; "when I saw that child fall, my heart just went into my throat! Don't cry, Allie; you ain't a bit hurt. The doctor says I can put some more poultice on your bad old bump."

"I'll get it," said Mrs. Burnett.

"No; you sit still. You are as pale as a ghost."

That is how it happened that Frank Burnett, coming home from the works by the back way, found in his kitchen the hated vixen, the trainer of criminals, the woman without character—Mrs. Deakin.

She told him what had happened and begged him not to frighten his wife, as there wasn't any real danger.

Mr. Deakin was likewise surprised upon arriving home. Supper was not ready, and his wife had gone over to the enemy. He went after her and was taken in.

Mrs. Deakin told him she couldn't come home because Mrs. Burnett was all upset, and some one would have to take care of the child. So Mr. Deakin and his two boys ate a cold lunch with Mr. Burnett and his boy.

Mr. Burnett sent Morton out to get two cigars, and while the women sat by the bed in the front room the men sat in the back room and smoked, while the three boys, awed by the revolution, kept very quiet.

"If Morton ever bothers you, Mr. Deakin," said Mr. Burnett, "you just let me know, and I'll tend to him."

"I was just going to say to you that Larry's apt to be too gay now and then, and if I ever hear of him picking on your children I'll make him remember it."

In the front room Mrs. Burnett was thanking Mrs. Deakin, who was hoping that her children had never bothered Mrs. Burnett very much. The little girl went to sleep, and the Deakin family went home.

That was the end of the feud. In each household there was a general order that in case of a neighborhood riot punishment should be visited upon those nearest at hand.

Those two houses, side by side, became the peace center of the west division.

The Deakin children were at liberty to go over and thump on the Burnett cottage organ.

But who ended the feud—the men, the women or the 6-year-old?—Chicago Record.

Runaway on the Ocean.

A runaway steamer must be an exceedingly unpleasant sort of sea serpent for the passengers on board her. The steamer Marchioness of Breadalbane, while making the passage from Rothesay to Gourock, met with an accident to her machinery, and the engineers were unable to stop her. The captain therefore took her out into midchannel and spun round in a circle till the steam was nearly exhausted, when the runaway was headed for Gourock, where she was secured by ropes and the rest of the steam run off.—London Graphic.

Positive as to One of Them.

"What lessons should we learn, Wendell," asked the Sunday school teacher, "from this story of demoniacal possession?"

"One of the lessons we should learn from it," replied the little Boston boy, "is that the word demoniacal is accented on the antepenultimate."—Chicago Tribune.

WHEN GOLD WAS HIGH.

The Memorable Scene of Black Friday on the Stock Exchange Recalled.

On Black Friday, Sept. 24, 1869, the goldroom is crowded two hours before the time of business. In the center excited brokers are betting, swearing and quarreling, many of them pallid with fear of ruin, others hilarious in expectation of big commissions. In a back office across from the goldroom Fisk, in shirt sleeves, struts up and down, declaring himself the Napoleon of the street. At this time the ring was believed to hold in gold and in contracts to deliver the same over $100,000,000.

Speyers, whom all suppose to represent Gould as well as Fisk, begins by offering 145, then 146, 147, 148, 149, but none will sell. "Put it up to 150," Fisk orders, and gold rises to that figure. At 150 a half million is sold him by Mr. James Brown, who has quietly organized a band of merchants to meet the gamblers on their own ground. From all over the country the "shorts" are telegraphing orders to buy. Speyers is informed that if he continues to put up gold he will be shot, but he goes on offering 151, 152, 153, 154. Still none will sell. Meantime the victims of the corner are summoned to pay in cash the difference between 135, at which the gold was borrowed, and 150, at which the firm is willing to settle. Fearing lest gold go to 200, many settle at 148. At 155, amid the tremendous roar of the bull brokers, bidding higher and higher, Brown again sells half a million. "One hundred and sixty for any part of $5,000,000." Brown sells $1,000,000 more. "One hundred and sixty-one for $5,000,000." No bid. "One hundred and sixty-two for $5,000,000." At first no response. Again, "162 for any part of $5,000,000." A voice is heard, "Sold $1,000,000 at 162." "One hundred and sixty-three and a half for $5,000,000." "Sold $5,000,000 at 163½." Crash! The market has been broken, and by Gould's sales.—Scribner's.

The World's Greatest Forest.

It appears that Siberia from the plain of the Obi river on the west to the valley of the Indighirka on the east is one great timber belt, averaging more than 1,000 miles in breadth from north to south—being fully 1,700 miles wide in the Yenisei district—and having a length from east to west of about 3,000 miles. Unlike equatorial forests, the trees of the Siberian taiga are mainly conifers, comprising pines of several varieties, firs and larches. In the Yenisei, Lena and Olenek regions there are thousands of square miles where no human being has ever been. The long stemmed conifers rise to a height of 150 feet and stand so closely together that walking among them is difficult.

The dense, lofty tops exclude the pale arctic sunshine, and the straight, pale trunks, all looking exactly alike, so bewilder the eye in the obscurity that all sense of direction is lost. Even the most experienced trappers of sable dare not venture into the dense tiagas without taking the precaution of "blazing" the trees constantly with hatchets as they walk forward. If lost there, the hunter rarely finds his way out, but perishes miserably from starvation and cold.

The natives avoid the tiagas and have a name for them which signifies "places where the mind is lost."

FISHERMEN OF LABRADOR.

They Have Picturesque Little Boats With Reddish Brown Sails.

A Labrador fishing stage usually consists of a long, low frame house and little one room huts, or "tilts," as they are called. The house is used as a store and dwelling for the agent of the Newfoundland merchant who has fitted up the stage. All the fishermen who occupy the tilts work for the merchant and are paid for their fish in provisions from the store.

The tilts are like those seen in the Newfoundland fishing and mining outposts (every settlement in Newfoundland except St. John's is an outpost). The sides are logs set upright and supporting sod covered roofs—wretched abodes at the best. Along the straits of Belle Isle the Labrador coast is fringed with a strip of coarse grass land, and here you may see an occasional small vegetable garden surrounded by a fish net for a fence. At Blanc Sablon I saw a desolate little burying ground amid the swaying rushes. Near by lay a couple of wornout boats, bottom up, and nets spread over the ground to dry. Here, too, I saw for the first time the dapper little Labrador gasher—a small fishing craft not much larger than a dory, but with sharp prow and stern and two masts fitted with reddish brown sails. These are telling bits of color when the gashers skim over the deep blue water, with the foam streaking along their quarters and glittering in their wake.

Altogether it was a varied scene. The headland, from a staff on which there fluttered the flag of the merchant who owned the "outfit," the gashers dashing in and out among the punts and jacks (stoutly built two stickers larger than the gashers), a fishing schooner with furled sails, but with tell stained nets streaming from her spars in an endless variety of lights and shadows, according as the meshes twisted or bulged in the breeze, and in the distance the exquisite green and white spires of an iceberg.

A note of toil drones through it all, however, for women are sawing and chopping wood while the men are hauling the nets. A curious implement of fishing in these waters is a spyglass with plain window glass in place of a lens. A man in the bow of a fishing boat thrusts the glass in the water, and peering through it discovers whether there are fish enough on the bottom to make it worth while to anchor, for anchoring in deep water is a toilsome matter.—Gustav Kobbe in St. Nicholas.

DANGER FROM LIGHTNING.

Is It Increased or Diminished by the Presence of Many Telephone Wires?

There is a somewhat widespread impression that the use of so much wire for telephone and other electrical purposes in cities and towns largely increases the danger of lightning strokes. The notion is based upon the concentration within certain limits of a great quantity of conducting material, which, it is assumed, attracts the electricity and thereby increases the danger from it.

While it is true that the increase of conducting material increases the attraction, it is not true that it increases the danger. As a matter of fact, it decreases the danger, for the more surface electricity has over which to spread the more rapidly and quietly it is carried to the earth. A house with a metal roof is not often struck by lightning, for while the metal may attract the electricity it also gives it room to spread out, and its force is thus dissipated.

This fact was demonstrated by Franklin with his kite long ago, and lightning rods are put on buildings to give storm clouds a means of discharging their electricity into the earth. This discharge takes place without the report that we call thunder, for electricity makes no noise unless it meet some resisting medium.

It is a well known fact that there is less danger from lightning in cities than in the country, and this is due to the general use of iron, steel and other metals in city buildings. The buildings are tall and would seem, therefore, to be specially attractive to the lightning. Indeed they are often struck, but the metal in them dissipates the force of the fluid and carries it harmlessly and quietly to the earth. The effect of telephone wires upon atmospheric electricity has been under official investigation by the German department of telegraphs, and statistics from 900 cities show that the danger from lightning strokes is four times as great in towns that do not have the telephone as in those that have it. The conclusion of the whole matter, therefore, is that an abundance of wires gives protection from lightning instead of increasing the danger.—Philadelphia Times.

Silverware Cheaper Than Dollars.

"You can now purchase solid silverware made up into forks, spoons, etc., which will weigh much more than the silver money you pay for it," said a jeweler yesterday. "In other words, you can buy silver with less silver than is contained in your purchase, notwithstanding the fact that a certain amount of labor has been put upon it to shape it into forks, spoons, etc. Silverware was never cheaper than it is today. Why, the prices are so far down that it is almost folly to buy plated ware, as you can purchase the sterling article for the same price.

"In eastern houses all fine ware is being sold by the ounce. If you ask the price of forks or spoons, the dealer does not name the figure per dozen, but tells you that the ware is so much per ounce. We are now selling spoons which formerly sold for $12 a dozen for just one-half that price. Plates and platters which are made of the best grades of white metals must now compete with solid silver goods, for their prices are nearly the same. The fact of a person using solid silver upon his table is now no criterion of his circumstances, for it is almost as cheap as any other."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Spider.

One problem fitted for the zeal of the folklorist would be the tracking back of the spider. There is that nice story about Robert Bruce and his having learned patience from the spider. The Islamites use the web of the spider in the flight of the prophet. Probably the Arabs had it direct from the Jews. There is a Talmudic tradition of David flying before Saul and of David hiding in a cave, and how he might have been discovered had not a spider woven its web across the entrance. This is precisely the same incident as is used in the hegira. The arachnida spins but a flimsy web, but her filaments have been stronger than cables, for they still hold fast to the legends of the past.—New York Times.

So He Should.

A writer in a magazine says the earth would be heated more than 190,000 degrees by being suddenly stopped—that is, it would at once become more than 60 times as hot as melted iron. Any man who, knowing these facts, attempts to stop the earth ought to be severely dealt with.—London Globe.

Early Christening of Washingtons.

Has the following entry in the parish register of Chislehurst ever been published, and how does it fit in with the ascertained facts of the Washington pedigree?

"1614. Laurence sonne of Laurence Washington & Anne his wife was christened on ye 24th daie of July in the place at Modingham, generosi."

Modingham, now Mottingham, is a hamlet between Chislehurst and Eltham, and according to Hasted's "History of Kent," 8vo edition, volume 1 (1797), page 480, Mottingham place belonged to the Stoddard family through the whole of the seventeenth century.—Notes and Queries.

Not Sufficiently Definite.

Mother—I told you to give your sister half of that apple, and you have eaten it all yourself.

Small Son—I offered it to her, and she sucked it a little, and then pushed it away.

"Oh, you mean that sister! I thought you meant the baby."—London Answers.

Couldn't Marry Nelly.

Dickens had been recently in Edinburgh, and Miss Rigby told me a good story of a lady I knew well who said: "I can never forgive you, Mr. Dickens, for the death of Nelly in 'The Curiosity Shop.'" "You would not have liked her," he said in reply, "to marry a butcher or a baker."—"Recollections of the Rev. G. D. Boyle."

UP TO DATE PHOTOGRAPHS.

They Are Costly, but Their Charm May Be Perennial.

Being photographed nowadays is an elaborate process. Heretofore when a woman wanted her photograph taken she went to the studio and arranged about the size of the picture and the number she wanted. She gave a reassuring touch to her hair, sat down before the camera, turned her head a little to the right or to the left, as the artist desired, and clamped on either temple, gazed fixedly, insipidly or otherwise, at a spot on the wall. Now the subject's "possibilities" are studied in detail. Nothing is left to accident. The fashionable woman carries her various gowns to the studio with her and tries them on, each in turn, that the artist may decide which suits her best. She pays $50 for the photographs.

Her hair is arranged by skillful hands in different ways, that a style of coiffure may be chosen which will be appropriate, not only to the contour of her face and head, but to the environments of the picture. The subject's hands and arms are criticised, likewise her throat and neck, to see whether a severe high costume or an evening gown shall be used. The topics of background and accessories are discussed.

All of these tinted carbon photographs are taken full length. Maybe the subject will pose as a dame of the first empire, with skimpy satin gown, elaborate coiffure, jeweled girdle, fan and vinaigrette. Perhaps she stands, half turned about, with her back to the spectator and her pure profile deftly brought out on a dark velvet curtain. All women would not look charming in such a position. The artist knows whom to choose, and the subject will wonder at her own beauty when she sees the picture.

A willful, coquettish girl is posed as a modern Priscilla. The quaint spinning wheel and high backed chair, the small paned window at the back of the colonial room, form a charming contrast with her rich brocade gown and beaming face. The scant, puffed sleeves set off the rounded arms, the curve of the wrist, the hand that grasps the wheel is like a rare old painting, and the undulating outlines of the figure are suggested, not revealed, by the prim folds of the flowered silk frock.

These latter day photographs are like paintings and are likely never to grow old fashioned. They have the charm that distinguishes the portrait painters of the old English school—a charm that custom will not stale. They will not become out of date and grotesque, like the photographs of 20 years ago, found in family albums. In those days a woman was hired to put the lights in the eyes, color the cheeks and paint the ribbon bows and artificial flowers of the ladies and the gay necktties and buttonhole bouquets of the gentlemen. The new photographs, be it a hundred years hence, always will be things of beauty, no matter what evolutions, contractions or diminutions may befall woman's dress.—New York Sun.

Cold That Kills and Cold That Cures.

In England severe cold generally kills a good many people. In certain parts of North America cold still more severe puts new life into them. It requires no argumentation to show that there must be a definite reason for this. The chief reason is that English cold is mostly damp, while in North America it is mostly dry. There is the greatest difference in the world between dry air and damp air. The former is usually air pure and simple, possessing a full quantity of oxygen and often charged highly with ozone. The latter consists of air mixed with the vapor of water. When the former air, fully oxygenated, is breathed, it stimulates more powerfully than champagne. The latter, less oxygenated and charged with vapor of water, not only does not stimulate, but depresses.—Public Opinion.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

July Wheat Closed Higher—Corn Unchanged—Oats Lower—Pork Products Higher.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CHICAGO, June 24.—After many advances and declines of varying magnitude, wheat closed ¼c higher to-day than on Saturday. The local crowd were inclined to sell freely on the hardness which was displayed at the start, and the advance was checked before it had well begun. C. W. Pardridge, a brother of the celebrated plunger, was a heavy seller of long wheat later, and on that liquidation a very important break took place, but there was enough buying to cover "short" stuff to bring about a recovery, the close, however, being easy at the advance already mentioned. July wheat opened from 70¼c to 70⅝c, sold between 71c and 68¾c, closing at 70¼c—¼c higher than Saturday. Cash wheat ruled weak and lower, closing about steady.

Corn—Prices were up and down corresponding to the moods of wheat. The close showed neither loss nor gain from Saturday. The selling that took place during the morning was rather large and carried prices down rapidly but they rallied and held steady. July corn opened 48¼, declined to 46⅜, rallied and closed at 48c. Cash corn was ⅛@⅜c. lower per bushel.

Oats—Sales of oats were heavy to-day and while going on there was little of strength or firmness to prices. The weakness that was on in wheat and corn during the morning furnished the excuse for selling, the later firmness in those grains having a salutary influence on oats. Prices had a fair range with the close ⅜c. under Saturday for July. Cash oats were weaker and from 1 to 1⅛ cents per bushel lower.

Provisions—There was no activity in provisions to-day. A steady to firm tone prevailed at the opening, the news from the stock yards being rather encouraging. Operators in product do not look for anything in the way of improvement until after the 4th of July, the pit wearing a neglected look to-day. After a dull, uninteresting session the close showed a gain of 15 cents for July pork; 2½c. for July lard and 5 to 7½c. for July ribs.

SPOTS AND FUTURES

New York Sun's Review of the Cotton Market.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The Sun says: Cotton fell sixteen to seventeen points and closed weak at a net decline for the day of fifteen points, with sales of 8,000 bales; futures dropped four points and closed easy. Manchester was dull for yarns and quiet for cloths. New Orleans dropped from six to eight points, then recovered two points of this. Spot cotton was ⅛c. lower here and 1-16c. lower at Savannah and St. Louis; Galveston and St. Louis were easy. Here 413 bales sold for spinning. The port receipts were 1,315 bales, against 3,488 last year.

To-day's features: The news favored the bears. Liverpool was disappointing. The fall of the Roseberry Cabinet points to a general election in England, which usually upsets business for the time being. Needed rains fell in the Atlantic States, the weather was warmer, and in districts where the precipitation had been excessive it was clearer, and finally the Signal Service predicted generally fair weather in Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama. Then, too, Wall street interests sold pretty freely, New Orleans, Liverpool and the Continent sold moderately, and some leading local operators attacked the market. General trade continues to improve. It is claimed that about 250,000 workmen within the last thirty days have had their wages increased 10 to 20 per cent. A better business was reported at Fall River, though at slightly easier prices. It is still a weather market in the cotton trade. The weather conditions for the moment are favorable, but it is not believed that the crop will be anywhere near as large as it was last year.

HANGED BY A MOB.

The Leader of a Gang of Firebugs Lynched Near New Orleans.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—John Frey, a young white man, the last survivor of an unfortunate family, was hanged this morning at Gretna, a suburb of New Orleans, in Jefferson, an adjacent parish just opposite the city, on the right bank of the river. Gretna has been suffering for several years from the depredations of firebugs, but none of the villains have ever been captured. Frey and a gang of young fellows were caught this morning, a mob was organized and Frey was hanged just back of the jail. The evidence against the others was not as conclusive as against Frey, and they were locked up. Tremendous excitement prevails at Gretna. Frey was a son of Dr. John Frey, who, with his family of several, lost their lives in the great storm at Cheneiri Camida two years ago.

Seventy-five people who attended a church festival at the Methodist church at Greenbackville, Va., Saturday evening, were made sick by eating ice cream. Several of the victims are very ill and fatal results are apprehended.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL

BOARD OF INSPECTION MAKING GOOD PROGRESS IN THEIR WORK.

Capt. Howgate's Case—Hubbard Taylor Smith Secures a Life Appointment in the Consular Service—Sensational Reports from Cuba.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Major Wm. Ludlow, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., chairman of the Nicaraguan Canal Board, reports that the Board returned to Rivas, Nicaragua, after completing the inspection of the western division of the canal from Brito to Lake Nicaragua, and on the date of the report, June 2d, were preparing for the inspection of the eastern division, purposing to leave Rivas by the steamer of June 5th, taking to the woods and proceeding on foot along the route of the canal. The Board, (as heretofore announced in the United Press cable messages) intend to go to Panama on the Montgomery for an inspection of the Panama Canal, and thence return on that vessel to the United States, landing either at Mobile or in New York, as the Board may desire.

The Board have requested to be landed at Mobile. The members of the Board have been treated with the greatest courtesy by the President of Nicaragua and Government officials, and their health has been exellent.

Secretary Olney has received a dispatch stating that the Board had reached Greytown on June 20th and would start for Colon on the 25th, The Montgomery has gone to Greytown to get them.

Captain Howgate's counsel have decided not to enter an application for a new trial, but are now busy preparing a bill of exceptions, which will go before Judge McComas for his signature by the end of the week and will then come before the Court of Appeals. This Court will not convene until October next.

Hubbard Taylor Smith, of Indiana, made the highest percentage examination held at the State Department on Saturday for the position of consular clerk and has been recommended to the Secretary of State for appointment. The tenure of the office is for life, the only civil position of the sort in the Federal service outside of the judiciary. Mr. Smith, familiarly known as "Hub" Smith, well-known as the author of some of the most popular songs of the day, including the "Grapevine Swing" and the "Tale of Woe," was private secretary to John W. Foster when the latter was Secretary of State, and was also an attache of the Behring Sea tribunal at Paris. He is at present a clerk in the State Department. Mr. Smith will probable be assigned to Berlin.

The Spanish Minister, M. Dupuy de Lome, to-day expressed his surprise that the American newspapers continue to print sensational and unfounded rumors respecting the situation in Cuba. "It is always safe," he said, "to discount sensational dispatches from Tampa and Nassau. The representatives of the United Press and the leading American journals at Havana are generally aware of all that is happening, and it is not likely that information would become public along the Florida coast which could not be learned in advance at Havana. There is not a day but I am compelled to stamp as untrue dispatches from these places."

FOR SOUND MONEY.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

LOUISVILLE, KY., June 24.—On the eve of the Democratic State Convention only one thing can be predicted with any degree of probability and that is the platform will declare for a gold standard. The race is very close between Hardin and Clay for the Gubernatorial nomination, with the chances slightly in favor of the latter. Most of the instructed delegations are instructed for Hardin and sound money. But the majority of the delegations are uninstructed and in these Clay is rapidly gaining ground.

Should Hardin be nominated he will stand committed to a gold platform, though running as the candidate of the free silver men. This will effectually spoil any chances that Joe C. Blackburn may have had for the Senatorship, as he is wedded to the 16 to 1 idea. Unless Hardin is nominated on a free silver platform, which at present seems quite unlikely, the Kentuckian who has for so many years represented the people as Senator from the Ashland district will have to give way to a man who waves aloft the yellow flag. This man will in all probability be McCreary, who is a gold man, but withal a conservative one. He endorses the Democratic platform of 1892 which is in name a bimetallist declaration, but in reality if carried out would mean monometallism. Clay will have the support of nearly all of the gold men, who come to the Convention unhampered by instructions. There is always a chance that some man of great popularity, like ex-Governor Buckner for instance, will stampede a convention of this character, but in this case such a possibility is too remote to be seriously considered. This afternoon a Railroad Commissioner from the Second district will be nominated by a special convention and the strength of the gold and silver men in to-morrow's Gubernatorial Convention may be brought out by a test vote. It is said the platform will endorse Cleveland and Carlisle, but there is certain to be a lively fight should the attempt to do this be made. The Convention will be called to-morrow morning at Music Hall. It will certainly last two days and may be three days.

CREEDON WHIPS HENNESSY.

In a Six Round Contest—A Plucky Battle While it Lasted.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

BOSTON, June 24.—Dan Creedon, of Australia, whipped Billy Hennessy, of Boston, in six rounds in the Suffolk Athletic Club, West Newton street tonight. It was plain to the eight hundred present that Creedon would win after the first round but Hennessy made a plucky battle while it lasted. In the 6th round, when he was floored by a left-hand punch which dazed him, he made a desperate attempt to regain his feet, but a right-hand swing on the jaw put him out.

TORNADO IN KENTUCKY

Causing Damage to Crops and Other Property.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

GREENSBORO, June 24.—A terrific storm passed over this section of the country this afternoon about 2 o'clock. No serious damage was done in this city, other than the destruction of many shade trees. Six miles east of here a tornado raged, destroying trees, crops and fences in its path. In some instances trees were blown across the railroad tracks. No news of any deaths or injuries to people have been received. The wheat crop is ruined where it was not cut.

LATE FOREIGN NEWS.

THE BRITISH MINISTRY TENDER THEIR RESIGNATION.

Lord Salisbury Agrees to Accept the Premiership Upon Certain Conditions—Emperor William's Visit to the U. S. Warship New York.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

LONDON, June 24.—The House of Commons was crowded with members and visitors at the opening of to-day's sitting. Upon the appearance of Hon. H. C. Campbell-Bannerman, Secretary of State for War, the Liberals gave him an ovation, rising to their feet and cheering. The Irish members sat silent. The Peers' gallery was filled with members of the upper house.

Sir William Harcourt made a brief statement, saying that as the adverse vote on Friday was in effect a vote of want of confidence in the Secretary of State for War, with whom the Government had associated themselves, they had therefore placed their resignations in the hands of the Queen, who had accepted them.

Mr. Balfour expressed regret that the Government had not dissolved Parliament instead of resigning.

Referring to Campbell-Bannerman, Sir William said he would take it upon himself to say that no abler, more respected or popular Minister [cheers from both sides] had ever filled the office. The Government, he said, would hold office only until their successors had been appointed, and he, therefore, would move that the House adjourn; but it was indispensable before this was done that the Behring Sea bill be passed, in order that it might receive the royal assent.

At the conclusion of the remarks of Mr. Balfour, the Behring Sea bill passed its third reading.

The House then adjourned until to-morrow.

LONDON, June 24.—In the House of Lords Lord Roseberry said that after the vote in the House of Commons on Friday, practically censuring Mr. H. Campbell-Bannerman, Secretary of State for War, upon the question of national defence, after he had foreshadowed the Government's great scheme of military reorganization, the Ministry felt it to be their duty to resign. They would therefore hold office only until their successors were appointed. The House then adjourned after passing the Behring Sea bill.

The representative of the United Press in London learns that Lord Salisbury will accept the Premiership only on condition that the Liberal leaders agree not to oppose his Government's getting the necessary estimates before the dissolution of Parliament, and also that no member of the Cabinet which he forms shall be opposed for re-election upon taking office. Lord Roseberry, upon consultation with his colleagues, found that several of them were unwilling to make these concessions, but negotiations are in progress, which, it is believed, will tend to an agreement on the part of the Liberals.

HAMBURG, June 24.—Emperor William, wearing the uniform of a German admiral, yesterday afternoon visited the war-ship New York, the flagship of the American squadron at Kiel. He was accompanied by Admiral Knorr, chief of the Baltic sea (Kiel) naval station, As His Majesty boarded the vessel at 1.15 o'clock, the crew manned the rails and a salute of 21 guns was fired. At the same time the German Imperial standard was broken out at the mainmast head. Admiral Kirkland and all the officers of the ship received the Emperor on the quarter-deck. All the officers were presented. His Majesty inspected the ship thoroughly, but was particularly interested in the revolving turrets, gun mechanism, torpedo tubes, and the officers' and men's quarters. He commented favorably upon all he saw, and showed technical knowledge. He also showed some familiarity with the design of the New York. After the inspection, refreshments were served in the cabin, The Emperor presented Commander Kirkland with an exquisite gold snuff-box studded with diamonds, the gems forming a frame to a portrait in enamel of His Majesty.

The Emperor left the ship at half-past 5 o'clock, all the American crews manning their rails and firing a 21-gun salute as he departed.

Immediately on his arrival in London yesterday from the cruise he had been making to Kiel and elsewhere Mr. Gladstone communicated with Lord Roseberry and accepted the latter's invitation to dine with him in Downing street. During the evening Mr. Herbert Asquith, the Home Secretary, was summoned to a conference.

Mr. Gladstone remained with Lord Roseberry until after 11 o'clock, breaking his physician's orders and his own rules. He then walked with Lord Tweedmouth, Lord Privy Seal, to the residence of Lord Rendel, in Carlton Gardens, where he is staying. The political clubs were thronged until the small hours with members and their friends, discussing the situation. The officers of the Conservative and Liberal whips were busy until midnight.

THE PRIZE FIGHTERS.

Bob Fitzsimmons on Trial in Syracuse for Manslaughter—Corbett's Wife Sues for Divorce.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

SYRACUSE, June 24.—The trial of Robert Fitzsimmons upon an indictment for manslaughter in the first degree in killing "Con" Riordan in a sparring match at the Grand Opera House, commenced here to-day. "Bob" came came here prepared to put up a big fight against conviction, for a verdict against him may mean a sentence of twenty years in prison.

By the noon recess only five men had been examined and two were allowed to take their seats in the jury box, subject to peremptory challenge. A close fight was made upon the question whether or not a juror was prejudiced against prize fighting and prize fighters. District Attorney S. Hove held that the question was improper, because every good citizen who obeyed the laws must be against prize fighting. Judge Wm. M. Ross allowed the question as it applied to prejudice in this case.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Upon the application of A. H. Hummel, Judge McAdam of the Superior Court, this morning appointed Edward Jacobs referee to try the issue involved in the suit for absolute divorce which Mrs. Ollie Corbett has brought against her husband, James J. Corbett, the pugilist, upon the statuory grounds. Corbett was married in 1885 and lived with his wife until last April, when she claims to have discovered evidence of his faithlessness, and brought suit for an absolute divorce. Corbett has put in a denial of his wife's charges, which raises an issue in the case that the referee will have to try.

Six Chinamen, who reached New York from Cuba yesterday, claiming to have been residents of New Orleans, were ordered by Secretary Carlisle to be deported.

NEWS OF THE NAVY.

The Squadron at Kiel Highly Complimented by the German Emperor—The Cruisers Raleigh and Atlanta on the Lookout for Cuban Filibusters.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Secretary Herbert this morning received the following telegram from Admiral Kirkland, dated at Kiel yesterday: "The German Emperor visited the New York to-day. Complimented the squadron, and the New York particularly, on the appearance of fireworks and illumination. He thanks the President for sending fine naval specimens. He will visit the cruiser New York again for more thorough inspection."

The new German Ambassador, Baron Max Guido Von Thielman, accompanied by Baron Ketteler, the Secretary of the Embassy, called upon Secretary Herbert to-day to formerly express the Emperor's gratification with the splendid American representation at the canal fetes. Naval officers think the Emperor, in expressing his desire to make a second visit to the White Squadron, has conferred distinction upon our war-ships, as he has visited no other fleet more than once and some of them not at all.

There is some disappointment, however, that his attention has not been directed to the Columbia which is incomparably the finest example of American design that has ever visited European waters, being, with the exception of her sister ship, the Minneapolis, the fastest and highest type of cruiser afloat in the world.

The Raleigh sailed to-day from Key West at 11 o'clock for a cruise at sea between Cuba and the Gulf States. It is not known whether her commander has instructions to look out for any filibustering expeditions, but there is no doubt that she will endeavor to intercept any unlawful vessels. While the Raleigh lies in port her movements are known, but the purpose of her trip is to keep her whereabouts unknown. She is liable to drop into any small port along the coast and thus prevent the assembling or sailing of filibusters bound for Cuba.

The cruiser Atlanta is under orders to leave New York harbor to-morrow to enforce the neutrality laws in Cuban waters. She will first stop at Port-au-Prince, Hayti, and when she leaves there her movements are apt to be somewhat perplexing to filibustering expeditions menacing the south coast of Cuba. After cruising as long as her coal lasts the Atlanta will go into Santiago de Cuba and lie there until her bunkers are replenished, being held in readiness to go out and give chase to any expedition that may be reported.

This new duty of the Atlanta, together with that of the Raleigh along the Gulf coast of the United States, indicates the determination of the administration to give Spain no opportunity of accusing this Government of negligence. While it is believed in official circles that the reports alleging violations of neutrality have been to some extent exaggerated, other American warships will be sent to the Gulf of Mexico if it should be demonstrated that the Atlanta and Raleigh are unequal to the task assigned to them. The cruiser Montgomery, which recently went to Colon and after spending a week there has now returned to Greytown, had orders to keep a sharp lookout for sympathetic movements in Central America in which Americans might be in.

DEATH OF LE GRAND BUELL.

His Widow Will Preach His Funeral Sermon.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

HOLLY, MICH., June 24.—The funeral of Le Grand Buell, who died Saturday, will be held at the M. E. Church tomorrow, when his widow will preach the funeral sermon. Mrs. Buell created a sensation three years ago by securing a divorce from the Rev. John F. Wethrell, of Clio, to enable her to marry Buell. The divorce and marriage occurred the same week. At the time of the marriage Mrs. Buell published a lengthy article in the local papers making public her reasons for marrying Buell, which was to reform him from his excessive drinking habits. This she failed to do. Mr. Buell for years wrote for the leading song journals of the country.

REVOLT IN MACEDONIA

Spreading Rapidly—Bulgarians Crossing the Frontier.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

LONDON, June 24.—A dispatch from Sofia to the Pall Mall Gazette says the Macedonian revolt is spreading rapidly between Vranja and Egri Palanca. Since June 19th there has been constant fighting around Palanca, during which the rebels destroyed railroad communication with the Vardar valley. Two bands of Bulgarians have crossed the frontier into Macedonia. The Cabinet are cowed by the war-like feeling of the populace and are undecided how to act. The Ministers have been threatened with assassination if they intervene to check the revolutionary movement.

From Dr. Wm. H. Taylor, State Chemist and Professor of Chemistry and Toxicology, Medical College of Virginia:

LABORATORY OF STATE ASSAYER AND CHEMIST, RICHMOND, VA., MAY 2, 1895.

I have analyzed the Tivoli Hofbrau Beer, manufactured by the Robert Portner Brewing Company, of Alexandria, Va., and find that it is pure and, in all respects, of excellent quality. It is unexceptionable as a beverage, and I recommend it especially for medicinal use.

Things We Understand,

And Things We Do Not Understand.

The Depositor in the

Wilmington Savings and Trust Company

Does not understand how the decline in price of silver since 1873 caused the price of cotton to decline, when the price of cotton declined more rapidly for several years before '73 (when silver did not decline materially) than after '73, and was lower several years before the war than at present, though silver was twice as high at that time as it is at present. The same depositor does understand that his money in the draws interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, compounded quarterly. He is therefore provided with a good Umbrella when the "rainy day" comes.

—THE—

Wilmington Savings and Trust Company,

Has the largest capital of any strictly Savings Bank in North Carolina, and is fortified with a good percentage of surplus for the protection of depositors. This Bank invites investigation, and wishes to see every mechanic, wage-earner, salaried man and all others, keep a Savings Bank account and say something each week. June 3 tf

We say, "The Mill Still Grinds" and BARGAINS of real value continually come forth, which, to some extent, accounts for the general rush in our Store.

We stop just here to return sincere and heartfelt thanks to our large patronage, and cordially and earnstly solicit a continuance of the same. We invite strangers as well as our old friends and acquaintances to see our stock before buying elsewhere.

Very respectfully,
